Tanya Gupta : Chiki dude I love you. I have never meant someone as unapologetic, badass and savage as you are. From helping me figuring out how to write apping mails, chair theories, and discussing ISMP stuff, we definitely have good memories to look back on. Always love meeting you in the mess and discussing whatever is going on in our lives. Would have loved hanging out with you more. All the best for everything you aim to do in the future :D

Pranil Joshi : Yo junta! You, Adil and I were the perfect PC lab buddies. And all of us aced our apping together! But I could only know ki tu kitna machaati hai when we were together at Adobe. You have mad leadership skills and presentation skills. You were legit one of the best people to gossip with. And you gave the fanciest treats! (the one where my cheap ass still bought a vada pav xD) It is so easy to trigger you into one of your rants lol. Chup hi nahi hoti fir. Your drunk self is exactly like your sober self, and I don't mean this as a compliment haha. I'm pretty sure you're gonna reach great heights. You'll probably earn a ton of money just to continue to be unapologetically yourself. All the best!

Avani Mangal : Hola chiki pikii!! Well 700 words won't suffice our journey from 2016-2020, we came a long way. From completely despising each other in freshie year to absolutely loving those still opposite lifestyles in final year, has created a bond that was first withered, then gradually watered and finally cared with words of patience, care, concern, irritated smtimes still (when we woke up each other half asleep) and the list will go on. Our endless fry maggies, dramatic gestures, prof bing, and how can i forget you completing my lab manual in tenure :p I will miss those kachoris we had together, and crying over our synonymous sed lives in 2->3rd yr transition XD. I'll be there for u forever chiks..

Shubhankar Mihir Seth : Chikki! I'm always confused about putting 1 k or 2 ks. But regardless, I'm always here to find your phones. We had such fun on that Goa trip, and you lost your specs and Baheti had to get them from Bombay. I still have that shady video of you going all gangster at the beach ;) We've solved so many problems together from mentees to roommates XD - I'm glad someone found my advice useful. From our initial discussions about branch-changing to having you on the SMP team and then depending on you for IE504, it's been a fun ride! Stay in touch!

Parthasarathi Khirwadkar : Yo Archiki! Analog lab partner! 😊 We had a lot of fun struggling with analog lab experiments. Bitching about TAs and getting the theoretically correct results by any means possible! 😊 It is possible that we slightly nudged our data 😊. And finally, making the Theremin with you was awesome! I still have the copper pipe that I got from an AC repair shop, which we used as an antenna of the Theremin 🤪. The very last moment, when it all started working was of pure exhilaration (that was the only time the project ever worked). We didn't work together on many projects but this was the most fun. Aise hi machati rehe 😊

Aniket Bhatia : Fellow BCer, that's how we met! EE111 kaisa nikala hai humne, hum hee jaante hai xD. Then comes the biggest mare's nest leaving us in a quandary (yes, I looked this word up lol). Those days and nights (so it seemed, that email!!) banging on profs' doors, and using our acting prowess to the fullest! Finally we made it to CSP. We can surely go on more of those treats, we got one more year :P, and who doesn't love to listen stories from the drunk Archiki ;).

Piyush Gupta : Hi Archiki, we have not have many interactions but I have definitely found you around since our first year. It was always fun hanging out whenever we met in h10 or Avanis room :D All the best for your future x :)
