Yearbook
2020

Pranil Joshi : 700 characters are too few. There is nothing I could write here about what you mean to me that you don't already know. I don't think calling us mere 'friends' does justice to the bond we share. You know me better than literally everybody else in my life. You were there for me at some of my lowest points, and you showed me that life is good after all. Likewise, remember that you can always count on me for anything. Yearbook is not meant for friends who are always gonna be in touch. Let's make sure we do that. If ever we haven't texted in some time, let it be only because 1, texting is out and holograms are the new shizz, or 2, one of us has died.

Harsh Siloiya : Yo Aniket, you're probably the most all-rounder maggu I've met in insti. You have motivated me to practice my skills in TT so I could beat you someday :p. I'll miss our random discussions about random stuff and making fun of Kapse eventually. Also stop milking HIMYM dry and go watch a new TV show already!

Pushan Bal : Another person I have known from before insti. Is saal same hostel me the to we could interact a lot more. Your visualization skills are next level dude. I still remember in 12th class jab tum physics problems phodte the and mai sochta tha ki isme energy conserve karu ya force balance karu :p. Apna cycling trip ho nahi paya re. But it has been a pleasure and an honour to know you. Stay in touch always!

Kratvesh Pandey : Kholuuuu! Apna cycle trip kab hoga Marines tak walaaa? I was really excited for that you know. You're my major motivation to workout and to run. Earlier I used to think kaafi serious sa banda hoga tu par kaafi chilled out hai bro. Bht suna tha tere teaching skills GOD Hein and Sule ke course mein tune 2-3 ghante padha ke prove kar diya tha :) I haven't played much TT with you but whatever we played was fun.

Sumanth Kandala : You were one of my first friends in the campus, and are now one of my closest! You know me better than almost anyone (Maybe cuz we are just way too similar in so many ways)! You know what you mean to me and how much I respect you! I really don't like writing this post at all, because it feels like we're saying goodbye (which you know we aren't) and I feel like the Rachel who's going away from Ross (JUST AS F.R.I.E.N.D.S.)! But I convinced myself to write this because I wanted to remind you that I have a better record against you in Badminton and TT (cuz your serves don't end up on my side half the time we play) :P! Take care of Joey (Kapse) for one more year and ship him off to me next fall!

Yash Shrivardhankar : Bhawa, you weren't our kholu but the nickname made me feel you were all these 4 years xD. Table Tennis days were so so <3. I had most fun playing with you because aapn doghe hi titkech kharab khelto xD. And we just kept making plans for all the next years and never played again :(. It was so good knowing you man! Freshie year dining table discussions were so interesting. You are so humble and down to earth and yet badass at work! Keep up the spirit and do keep exploring things as you always did! Stay in touch!
